As the question of onium smeagling has been ravived and an endeavour made to throw odium on the Colony in this matter, it may be as well to say something further on the subject. We have before attempted to show that Mr. BREDON's estimate of the drug smuggled from this port is greatly in excess of the real figure. Unfortunately there are no returns available which place the matter beyond doubt. Mr. Barron's figures are merely the result of an estimate, and it is the discovery has been made that a crop of pop- go unchallenged. Surely we have "too much to be regretted a man in Mr. Nicolson's lashioned grain, the increase in its onlitivation and May were not barristers, yet all three per-Chinese Customs estimate. "Old Resident" in his letter published on Monday endeavoured to trace a connection between opium smuggling and the present lawless state of this Colony. The opium smuggling has been immensely exaggerated, and the large fleet of rovenue cruisers employed in the blockade of this island are designed not so much for the suppression of contraband traffic as for harassing the legitimate trade of the Colony, and promoting an idea among the native population that China still has jurisdiction over the commerce to and from Hongkong. The Chinese Government has never been reconciled to the cession of this island, and there is only too good ground for believing, as Sir ARTHUE KENNEDY remarked at his fare well banquet, that there are some Englishmen ready to advocate and promote its retrocession. Any encroachment, seized by the judgment creditors of Mr. Lilley, of justice in such a case in China. therefore, by the Chinese on British jurisdiction, or any interference with the trade of the Colony ought to be promptly resisted. For the insintenance of the Cap-shui-moon Customs Station there may be some slight ercuse, as to a certain extent, but not wholly, he had received no reply from his agent at Sin, justified in baptizing him.
